

State Representative Volunteer Role Description

Make a significant contribution to protect wildlife in your state—Apply to be a specialized volunteer State Representative with Project Coyote!

Volunteer Role Overview

State Representatives are specialized, high-achieving, long-term volunteers who lead efforts for Project Coyote's critical campaigns for wild carnivores at the local and state levels. State Representatives are entrusted with representing Project Coyote's brand, including in states that do not currently have Project Coyote staff or volunteer chapters, advancing policy and community initiatives to protect wild carnivores. Working closely with Project Coyote's program and communications staff, State Representatives advance the organization's mission, programs, and campaigns in key regions by raising awareness about key campaigns and programs, cultivating grassroots support, and tracking state-based legislation and issues affecting carnivores.

The volunteers who dedicate their time and energy to Project Coyote are the heart of our wildlife protection efforts. As frontline champions for wild carnivores, our State Representatives extend our reach into states where policy decisions directly impact wildlife. We deeply value these passionate individuals who amplify our voice and mission at the local and state levels, making possible what our small staff alone could never achieve. The reward of volunteering as a State Representative with Project Coyote goes beyond personal satisfaction—it's about joining a network of dedicated wildlife advocates working together to create meaningful change for coyotes and other carnivores across the country. By becoming part of our community, you'll connect with others who share your passion for protecting wildlife while developing valuable skills in advocacy, community organizing, and conservation policy.
